Fox Certified by U of U

Thurs 26 Apr 1984 W/ale

SALT LAKE-Spencer Fox, a local mortician, working for Olpin's Mortuary, has been certified by the University of Utah School of Medicine, to harvest donated corneas.

The course funded by the Utah Lions Eye Bank, gives Fox the specialty of harvesting donated corneas for the Utah Lions Eye Bank located at the University Medical Center. Fox, was one of fifteen funeral directors recently attending the day long course, which featured lectures and workshops on the harvesting process. This new skill, used voluntarily, helps support Utah's Cornea Transplant program. This newly trained group brings the total of morticians to 28 who are certified to perform the cornea harvesting.

"With these newly trained volunteers and the support of community Lions clubs, our cornea-harvesting program can now function in many areas throughout Utah," said Dr.

"Approaching the family at a time when they are emotionally upset is the hardest thing to do."

"Before any enucleation, there's a questionnaire that has to be filled out."

Randall Wilson, medical director of the Utah Lions Eye Bank, professor and chairman of the Department of Ophthalmology at the University Medical Center. "This will facilitate the numerous people who want to donate their corneas and increase our ability to help those waiting for transplants."

The Utah Lions Eye Bank supported 220 corneal transplants in 1983. They have between 25 and 35 patients on their waiting list at all times.
